

```

import requests

def get_weather(city_name):
    """Fetches and displays terminal-formatted weather data from wttr.in."""

    # Strip spaces and replace internal spaces with '+' to format for
    the URL query
    formatted_city = city_name.strip().replace(" ", "+")

    # Base URL using wttr.in (a terminal-focused weather service)
    # '?0' returns the current conditions only (ignores the 3-day bulky forecast)
    # '?m' forces metric units (Celsius, km/h). Use '?u' for Imperial (Fahrenheit, mph)
    url = f"https://wttr.in/{formatted_city}?0m"

    # Setup headers mimicking a console tool like curl so wttr.in
    sends raw ANSI text
    headers = {
        "User-Agent": "curl/7.79.1"
    }

    print(f"\nFetching weather updates for
    '{city_name.title()}'...\n")

    try:
        # Send GET request to the service
        response = requests.get(url, headers=headers, timeout=10)

        # Check if the request returned a successful status code
        if response.status_code == 200:
            # Print the text directly; it retains beautiful
            terminal-based ANSI colors and ASCII graphics print(response.text)
        else:
            print(f"Error: Could not retrieve data. (Status code: {response.status_code})")

    except requests.exceptions.Timeout: print("Error: The request timed out. Please check your internet connection.")
    except requests.exceptions.RequestException as e:
        print(f"An unexpected networking error occurred: {e}")

if __name__ == "__main__":
    # Ensure you have installed the requests library ('pip install requests')

```

```
print("=== CLI Weather App ===") city = input("Enter city or location name (e.g., London, New York, Tokyo): ")

if city.strip():
    get_weather(city)
else:
    print("Location cannot be empty.")
```